Unparalleled Excitement and Panic in Capel Court-Extent of the Losses Not Certain but Settling Day Is Looked to With Alarm -Curb Trading Goes on With Great Confusion After the Regular Closing Hour.

Special Cable Despatches to THE SUN. LONDON, May 9 .- Capel Court rivalled Wall Street in excitement and panic today, and the scene was unparalleled. The whole market broke in sympathy with the collapse in New York. The unprecedented situation was presented of Northern Pacific selling at the same moment for 130 in London and 500 in New York, the explanation, of course, being that London deliveries would be impossible in time to affect the corner.

The excitement spread from the Stock Exchange to the surrounding streets, especially after London's closing, when the news came of the wild times in New York. Street trading continued to 6 o'clock in the most erratic fashion. All sorts of prices for the same securities were quoted simultaneously and it was practically impossible to execute selling orders.

The Westminster Gazette comments on to-day's excitement as follows: "Thus goes on the present mad Yankee boom; of all Yankee booms perhaps the maddest."

The Evening Standard says the fall in consols and other home securities was caused by the fear that America would draw balances from this side.

The Evening News says the upward flight of Northern Pacific caused fresh uneasiness in the London market and renewed slumps. GLASGOW, May 9.-There was a panic at the Stock Exchange here this evening. The excitement was unprecedented. American operators threw over their holdings. It is feared that to-morrow's settlement will probably be disastrous. The panic was confined to American securities. LONDON, May 10.-There is little certainty regarding the extent of the losses caused by the slump here. One financia editor writes: "The losses during the last few days have been appalling and the panic to a tenfold degree chillied the hearts of those who live by stocks. There may be a rally, but recovery now would be akin to the sun rising after a liner with all its passengers had foundered."

The writer proceeds to describe the crowd of haggard, dejected men, beggared beyond hope, standing in the rain after the official closing of the Stock Exchange, huddled together in almost voiceless alarm.

Others profess that there is ground for hoping that the losses here will be small in proportion to what have been experfenced in America, but they admit the seriousness and anxiety with which the settlement beginning May 13 is awaited.

The Standard says that the position may be summed up as one of extreme uncertainty rather than actual alarm. Not only is the situation in New York imperfectly understood here, but there is also much uncertainty as to the extent to which the rise in prices had the effect of attracting buying on this side. Until quite recently, commendable caution had been shown by operators here in restricting their commitment and in taking short profits, and right up to the time of the present break In prices realizations have been almo t as much in evidence as fresh purchases, With the fortaightly settlement at hand, however, the feeling is one of considerable

The Telegraph quotes a high financial authority as applying the word disorganization to the position at the Stock Exchange, but he, like others, is reluctant to prophesy the course of events because enlightenment on the precise causes of the notified their brokers that they may not sition. be prepared to carry over shares for them.

The Daily Mail says there are all the appearances of a very serious financial crisis on settling day, a crisis which will make the boom a recollection of terror for a decade. It adds that at the start the boom rested on solid foundations, and that the wise who did not plunge and now keep their hands stand to lose little is not to be denied, but the British publicavoided the market when advances were justified and only can e in on the top floor. It is a bitter experience which has been their's before in matters American, but the evil is that the gambling maria is so strongly implanted in human nature that experience never

Bache & Co. Shortly After 2 o'Clock. that passed over Wall Street during the jewelry, all stolen. The boy arrived in Redtion with the commissary scandals, was day was started by the news, which travelled as fast as Wall Street news does travel over its own bailiwick, that a patron of the firm of J. S. Bache & Co. had delivered shortly after 2 o'clock a burtle of shares of North- | board for the summer for his sister and himern Pacific which at the opening of business in the morning had been in Troy. The him in a few days, would pay his board, he stocks had been brought down the river by said special train, and were rushed from Forty-second street to the broke rs' offices. "It was a most ordinary thing," said Mr. Bache when asked to tell about it; "there isn't anything to say. A customer of ours learned this morning that there were some shares of Northern Pacific in Troy which he could get; he wanted them here early this afternoon, and they were put on an engine and sent down here; that's all."

Mr. Bache did not give the particulars of the transaction, but he said that "it was quite a block of stock" and that delivery was made shortly after 2 o'clock Bache & Co, have a branch house in Troy fact that the report of the commission that and the transaction and the transportation of the stock were arranged through it. Mr. Bache said that his customer bought the stock vesterday morning, and as threequarters of an hour after the opening of the market it was on its way to New York, it must have been purchased very shortly after business began. The story told in the Street yesterday afternoon was that Bache & Co. were obliged to make delivery of some Northern Pacific stock by 2:15 o'clock and that as they had these share in Troy they rushed them down here in a race against time to make delivery. As, however, Northern Pacific sold here be-tween 10 o'clock and 10:30 all the way from 170 to 225, with certain indications of going on upward, it will be seen in the light of Mr. Bache's statement of his customer's purchase that it would have been practicable for a purchaser to buy stock in Troy at those prices in the morning and use it here in the last hour of trading, when the price ranged from 310 to 400, with profit, if he had enough shares. The cost of the trans portation from Albany was probably about $200.

The stocks were brought down from Troy by a special messenger, who made the trip over the New York Central Rail-road in one of the special engines used by officials of the railroad company or their guests, one of the engines with upholstered quarters and large plate glass windows which are built for observation purposes. It was No. 29, named the Mohawk, and was run by Engineer Judge of the Mohawk run by Engineer Judge of the Mohawk division of the road. The engine left Troy at 10:44 with orders for fast time but not for record time. It pulled into the annex shed of the Grand Central Station at 1:35, five minutes after express train No. 19, which had left Albany at 9:25. The discovery which had left Albany at 9.23. The distance from Albany to the Grand Central is 147 miles and the distance from Troy to the station is 151 miles. The enrine with the stocks made the trip down the river in less time than the southbound. Empire State express makes the run, doing it in two hours and fifty-one minutes, while the Empire State train takes three hours for the southbound journey, although she goes up to Albany in two hours and forty

There were 484 girls now in the mutual benefit, she said, and last year $1,521 had been paid out in benefits.
